"Driveways are $10—plus a 20 pound bag of kibble."

"I'm putting in for a transfer...I can't afford to work in the Pentagon."

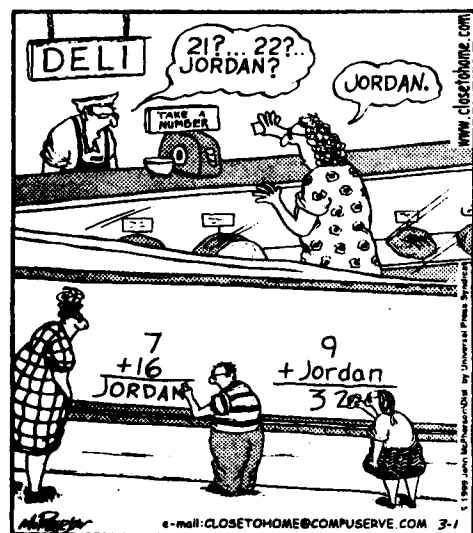

"According to the infomercial, it takes only a few nights to train yourself to use it, and you can lose six pounds a week."

CLOSE TO HOME by John McPherson

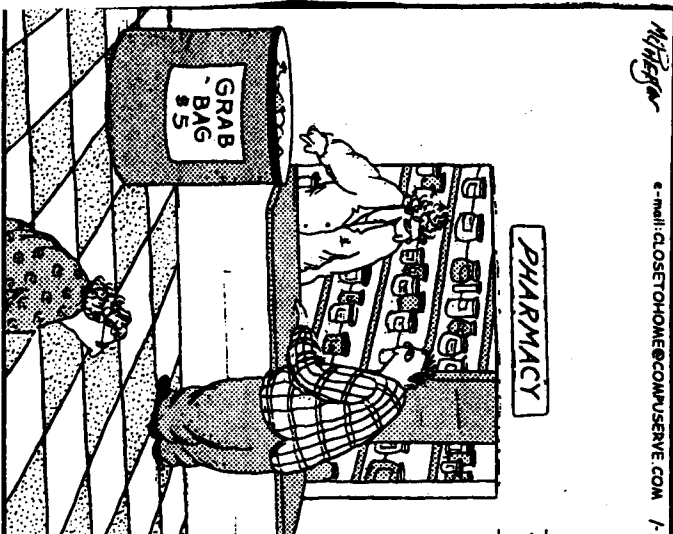

As Frank finished his six-hour shoveling job, he suddenly heard the evil cry he'd heard so many times before.

CLOSE TO HOME JOHN McPHERSON

In an unprecedented display of respect for a professional athlete, Michael Jordan's No. 23 is retired from all aspects of American culture.

"Your prescription will be $80, or if you want, you can try our grab bag for $5 and hope you get lucky."

"Your brakes are all set, Mrs. Helfer. However, our insurance company requires that you wear this protective suit throughout our 90-day warranty period."

Every year during finals, Mr. Garmon flushes out several cheaters with the same bluff.

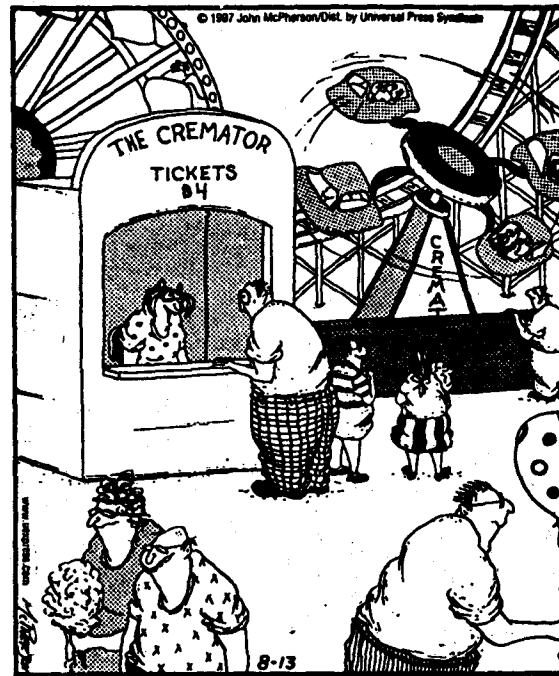

CLOSE TO HOME JOHN McPHERSON

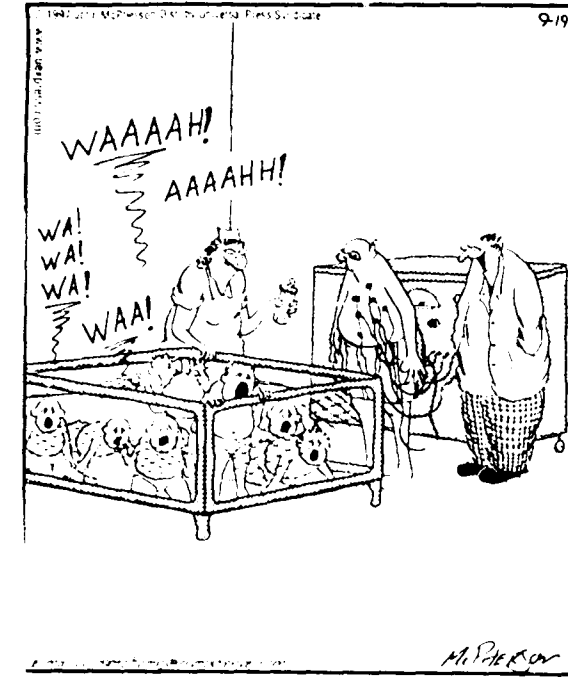

The editor of Consumer Reports experiences a momentary lapse of reason.

"For an additional one dollar per ticket, would you like to buy disability insurance?"

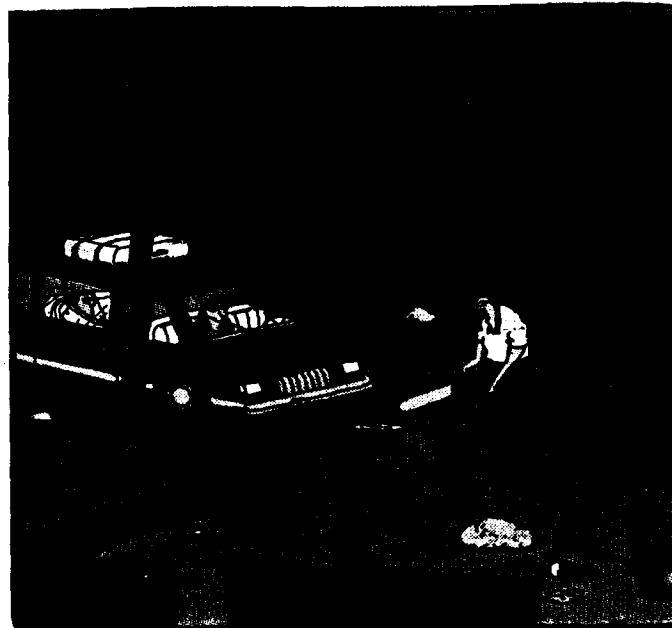

CLOSE TO HOME JOHN McPHERSON

"It's the latest version of the stress test. We'll monitor your heart rate as you try to feed these seven hungry babies with just one bottle."

"All right! 8.65! You just made it into the hall of fame, Mrs. Kestner!"

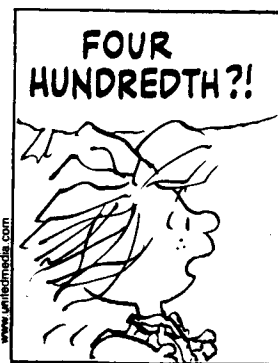

"Will you relax?! Trust me. This shortcut is going to shave 20 minutes off our trip."

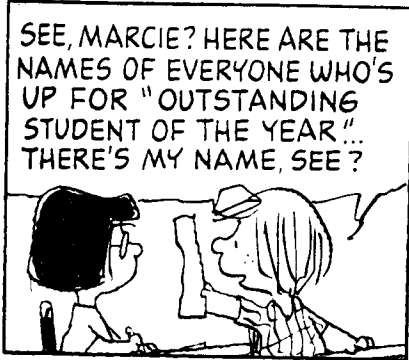

LUGGERS by Gary Brookins

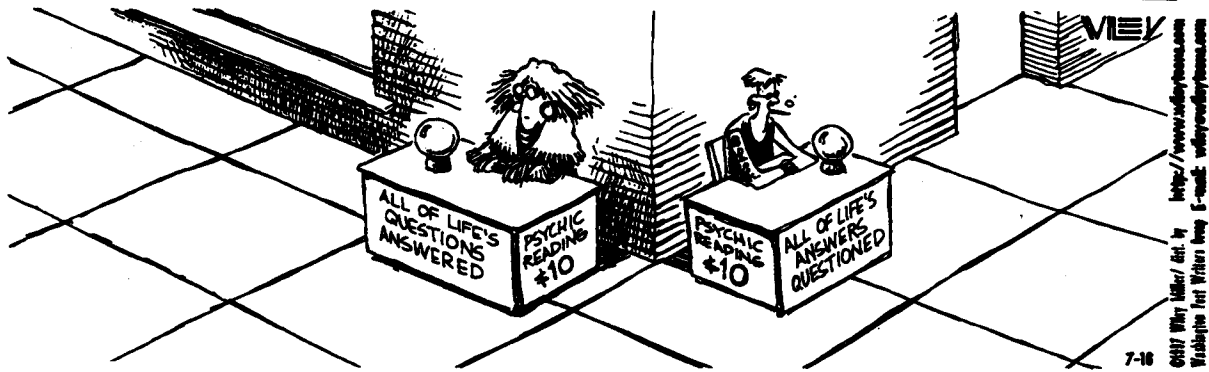

Luggers always count their money before they start pumping gas at the self-service station.
